In a 2009 study of the debt collection industry, the Commission concluded that the “most significant change in the debt collection business in recent years has been the advent and growth of debt buying.” “Debt buying” refers to the sale of debt by creditors or other debt owners to buyers that then attempt to collect the debt or sell it to other buyers.

Debt buying
can reduce the losses that creditors incur
in providing credit, thereby allowing creditors to provide more credit at lower prices. Debt
buying,

may raise
significant
consumer

concerns. The FTC receives
more consumer
complaints
about debt
collectors,

buyers, than

single industry.
Many of these
complaints
appear to have their origins in the quantity
and quality of information
that collectors
have about debts. In its

Indeed, the

launched a self- regulatory effort to address some of these concerns, and the FTC is encouraged by that effort. This study of debt buyers is the first large-scale empirical assessment of

sector of the collection industry. The FTC hopes that
its findings

of debt buying,

prompt further study of the industry. To conduct its study, the Commission obtained information about debts and debt buying practices from nine of the largest debt buyers that collectively bought 76.1% of the debt sold in 2008, with six of these debt buyers providing the information the Commission used in most of its analysis. The

FTC also considered its prior enforcement and policy work related to debt collection, as well as available research concerning debt buying. The study
