A biography of the Armenian painter that "adds immeasurable to the interest of [his] art . . . Carefully researched, well written, [and] enlightening" (The New York Review of Books). In this first full-scale biography, Nouritza Matossian charts the mysterious and tragic life of Arshile Gorky, one of the most influential painters of the twentieth century. Born Manoug Adoian in Armenia, he survived the Turkish genocide of 1915 before coming to America, where he posed as a cousin of the famous Russian author Maxim Gorky. One of the first abstract expressionists, Gorky became a major figure of the New York School, which included de Kooning, Rothko, Pollock, and others. But after a devastating series of illnesses, injuries, and personal setbacks, he committed suicide at the age of forty-six. In Black Angel, arts journalist Matossian analyzes Gorky's personal letters, as well as other new source material. She writes with authority, insight, and compassion about the powerful influence Gorky's life and Armenian heritage had upon his painting.

In the fall of 1913, a statue of a crestfallen angel was erected in Iowa City’s Oakland Cemetery. During the intervening century, this macabre memorial to the Feldwert family has spawned a number of sinister legends, primarily due to its atypical posture and coloration. But did these spine-chilling tales arise solely from the downcast aspect and blackness of the angel? Definitely not! Theresa Dolezal Feldwert was an enigmatic as the statue she commissioned. An elderly widow as well as a wheelchair-bound amputee almost certainly suffering from clinical depression, Feldwert inadvertently contributed to the legends herself. Her lifelong career as a midwife formed the basis of her public persona, and the historical association between midwifery and witchcraft would not have been lost on the Iowa City community. This professional stigma, coupled with Feldwert’s often eccentric behavior, provided a feast of fodder for local storytellers. This true account of the mysterious Feldwert memorial and the even more mystifying woman behind it sheds much-needed light on the legends of the Black Angel – legends which continue to be told to the present day. Logic tells us that if there are Bright Angels, there must also be Black Angels. Prior to meeting Zetta, Nathan believed in neither. Before encountering Zetta, Nathan felt that religion was something one did, rather than something one lived. Nathans religious views changed radically when he and Zetta traveled to Mount Zion Plantation, deep in the black water swamps of southern Louisiana. Mount Zion Plantation was the ancestral home of three of the most beautiful Black Angels that the Dark Side ever created. The Greek Revival home at Mount Zion rivaled the most exquisite plantation homes of the Old South. Zetta, who was also stunningly beautiful, represented the Bright Side. Titanic forces were afoot, deep in the ancient quagmire where evil ruled and sane men feared to tread. Ray Johnson again takes his readers on a perilous journey to the Dark Side. Beautiful angels, each serving different Gods, do battle for Nathans immortal soul. As with his previous novels, Bright Angels-Black Angels, holds the reader spellbound until the final page, gripping their attention like a riled swamp gator that refuses to let go.

Uprooted from my comfort zone at about four to five years of age, I never got to experience a normal childhood. I was forced to live with a family member who treated me like next to nothing. Confused and seeking a way out of horrific conditions, I became acquainted with Jesus, and as the years passed me by, I learned that He was always a part of my life. No matter how dark things would get, He was always there to provide refuge. The day that Granny told me that I was everybody's black angel opened my young and still innocent eyes to the fact that I was hated by the one who was supposed to love me most. Not because I did anything wrong, but because I was favored and loved by God. Granny believed she had to break me the best she could, because she couldn't stop what God had growing inside of this young, powerful, and anointed vessel. This Black Angel was chosen. I was gifted. I was different. I was set aside for God's purposes at His appointed time. Granny did a number on me but she couldn't end what God had started.
