A fascinating
exploration of
how insights from

computer
algorithms can be applied to our
everyday lives,
helping to solve
common decision-
making problems
and illuminate the
workings of the human mind All
our lives are constrained by limited space and time, limits that give rise to a particular set of problems. What should we do, or leave undone, in a day or a lifetime? How much messiness should we accept? What balance of new activities and familiar favorites is the most fulfilling? These may seem like uniquely human quandaries, but they are not: computers, too, face the same constraints, so computer scientists have been grappling with their version of such issues for decades. And the solutions they've found have much to teach us. In a dazzlingly interdisciplinary work, acclaimed author Brian

Christian and cognitive scientist
Tom Griffiths
show how the algorithms used
by computers can also untangle very
human questions.
They explain how
to have better
hunches and
when to leave

The scientific

developments
at the end of the past
millennium
were dominated by the huge
increase and
diversity of disciplines
with the
common label
“computer

science". The theoretical foundations of such disciplines have become known as theoretical computer science. This book highlights some key issues of theoretical

computer
science as
they seem to us now, at the beginning of the new
millennium.
The text is based on

columnists
themselves
selected the material they wanted for the book, and the editors had a
