THE #1 TRUE CRIME BESTSELLER. Serial killings, child abductions, organised crime hits and domestic murders. This is the memoir of a homicide detective. WINNER OF 2021 DANGER PRIZE FOR NON-FICTION Here I am: tall and broad, shaved head, had my nose broken three times fighting. Black suit, white shirt, the big city homicide detective. I've led investigations into serial killings, child abductions, organised crime hits and domestic murders. But beneath the suit, I've got an Om symbol in the shape of a Buddha tattooed on my right bicep. It balances the tattoo on my left ribs: Better to die on your feet than live on your knees. That's how I choose to live my life. As a cop, I got paid to catch killers and I learned what doing it can cost you. It cost me marriages and friendships. It cost me my reputation. They tell you not to let a case get personal, but I think it has to. Each one has taken a piece out of me and added a piece, until there's only pieces. I catch killers - it's what I do. It's who I am. Gary Jubelin was one of Australia's most celebrated detectives, leading investigations into the disappearance of preschooler William Tyrrell, the serial killing of three Aboriginal children in Bowraville and the brutal gangland murder of Terry Falconer. During his 34-year career, Detective Chief Inspector Jubelin also ran the crime scene following the Lindt Cafe siege, investigated the death of Caroline Byrne and recovered the body of Matthew Leveson. Jubelin retired from the force in 2019. This is his story.

In this thesis, Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman and Tennessee Williams' A Streetcar Named Desire are analyzed via Freudian psychoanalytic theories. In the first chapter of this study, firstly the relation between literature and psychoanalysis is explained regarding the human psychology as a subject matter for both fields. Later, the key Freudian psychoanalytic theories are explicated in order to provide the ground for the analysis of the protagonist in the selected plays. The second chapter of this study focuses upon the psychoanalytic examination of the protagonist in Death of a Salesman in the context of American dream by working through his psychosexual development, his contradictory personality, his relationship with other characters, his physical and mental struggle as an oppressed common man in the capitalistic American society and his consultation to defense mechanisms and suicide as solution to his problems. In the third chapter, the female protagonist of A Streetcar Named Desire is studied through exploring the motives behind her behaviors and gradual mental deterioration by investigating her inter-personal relations, obsessions, past experiences and environmental elements that contribute her striving as an object and ostracized woman in the patriarchal society. Accordingly, the aim of this study is to examine the relationship of individuals with society that starts up within the family through the internalization of the cultural ideals to and to explore the role of the identity formation process, the subconscious and external factors in the personality development, behavior pattern, decision making process and inter-personal relations of an individual. It also intends to anatomize the possible results of traumatic past experiences, of a defect in the process of the instillation of cultural ideals, and the resolutions consulted by both society and individuals.

Death of a Salesman is regarded as one of the greatest American plays. Its popularity in America is explained by the fact that its theme is related closely to the social realities of life in that country. It is, also, essentially a "modernistic" play and it makes a powerful impression upon the reader because of its realism and pathos.This book is a critical study of the play and is designed to meet the examination requirements of advanced university students. Every aspect of the play has thoroughly been discussed and every point of view has been included.No originality is claimed for this book. It is not a research paper. The object was to co-ordinate and simplify available critical material and to present it to the student in an intelligible and assimilable form.

In 1983, Arthur Miller was invited to Beijing to direct the first Chinese production of Death of a Salesman. This book is the diary he kept during of that unique and eccentric production. The diary portrays the challenges that faced Miller as a Liberal American playwright and director working in Communist China. Miller's major concern was how to overcome the linguistic and cultural difficulties of trying to communicate his artistic vision to a Chinese cast. The result is not merely an interesting account of a highly unusual production, but it also reveals the process any production may go through, and is an insight into the mind of a considerate director.

Seminar paper from the year 2004 in the subject Interpreting / Translating , grade: 2,0, Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz (Fachbereich Angewandte Sprach- und Kulturwissenschaft), course: Highlights of Mid-20th-Century American Drama, 7 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: Since the existence of life on earth there has been the struggle between the stronger and the weaker of all creatures. The species that had adapted best obtained the greatest chance to prevail in this "combat" . - In exactly the same way we can consider the history of mankind as surviving of the fittest. Nowadays it is not the physique alone that decides if somebody gets above the others or not. It 's more or less the rich combination of certain abilities, ambitions and values that make up the secret of success. Nevertheless we can still talk about a kind of natural selection. Although skills and knowledge can be trained, and abilities and competences can be improved by means of special learning methods, somebody who wants to be at the top must already have a certain biological and genetic qualification. Willy Loman, the main character of the play Death of a Salesman, is a salesman past sixty years of age. In his youth he believes that he has found the secret to success .Willy is convinced that he will make it if he tries his luck in the business and starts his career in a selling firm. He never has any doubt about achieving his aim as he is of the opinion to have all traits of character and competences he needs. But in reality Willy can be considered as a loser and a poor guy who only claims himself to be at the top. He brings up his two boys in these illusions and is assured of having chosen the right way. The paper deals on the one hand with the main character of the play himself, his dreams, illusions and wrong values that finally lead to his failure and suicide. On the other hand it treats the influence that these illusions exert on his two boys and their wrong upbringing.

Seminar paper from the year 2003 in the subject American Studies - Literature, grade: 1,0 (A), University of Frankfurt (Main) (IEAS), course: Introduction to Literature Studies, language: English, abstract: In this paper I will try analyze the reasons for Willy's failure. Is it his own fault that he is not able to succeed in his life? Or is the society he lives in to blame as well? As Miller is known for his critical views on modern society , I will try to find out if it is not society that is responsible for Willy's failure. At first, I am going to examine how Miller describes society in his play. Next , I will analyse Willy's dream and what he thinks is most important to achieve success. At last, I will compare those conceptions in order to find out what leads Willy to his failure. 2 Characterization of the society Willy lives in The house Willy and his wife Linda live in is described as a "small, fragile-seeming home with a "solid vault of apartment houses around (Miller 5) This description at the beginning of the play already reveals a feeling of threat. It seems as if those tall apartment houses menace the home of Willy and Linda. Those tall buildings could stand for progress and change within society as they are now built everywhere, whereas Willy's house could represent isolation and former times. Miller emphasizes these images by saying that Willy's house stands amidst those tall buildings like "a dream rising out of reality" (Miller 5). While reading this threatening image at the beginning of the play, the reader already starts to fear that Willy's house will be swallowed by those apartment houses, as there seems no escaping. At the end of the play, this presentiment becomes real as Miller describes that "over the house the hard towers of the apartment buildings rise into sharp focus" (Miller 151). As the house does not only stand for itself but also for its inhabitants, those passages could be interpreted in the way that people who do not follow the ever-changing and progressive society will be excluded from and even destroyed by it. Apparently, in this society one has no other choice than to follow the progress or be left behind. If one is not able to do so – for whatever reasons – one will not be able to resist for long, he is condemned to lose against this reckless society. In another scene, Willy tells his wife Linda: The street is lined with cars. There's not a breath of fresh air in the neighborhood. The grass don't grow any more, you can't raise a carrot in the back yard. They should've had a law against apartment houses (Miller 13).

Seminar paper from the year 2008 in the subject American Studies - Literature, grade: 2,0, University of Paderborn, language: English, abstract: He wants to live on through something - and in his case, his masterpiece is his son. I think all of us want that, and it gets more poignant as we get more anonymous in this world. This quote, said by the author of Death of a Salesman Arthur Miller in 1994, provides just a slight insight into the father-son relationship of Willy and Biff Loman which I will analyze in the present term paper in depth. Moreover, I will have a closer look at the Loman family and how they interact. Firstly, the author will be briefly introduced and the background and the reasons for writing the play are pointed out. Furthermore I will give an overview of the drama and its structure and formal aspects. After this my attention will be directed on the Loman family and I will initially focus on its members and characterize them. Then I will analyze how the relationship between Willy and Biff has developed and why it fails during the play. Finally, I will give a conclusion which will sum up the most important findings which I figured out during my analysis.

"First published in the United States of America by The Viking Press, 1949" -T.p. verso.

Stephen Crane's immortal masterpiece about the nightmare of war was first published in 1895 and brought its young author immediate international fame. Set during the Civil War, it tells of the brutal disillusionment of a young recruit who had dreamed of the thrill and glory of war, only to find himself fleeing the horror of a battlefield. Shame over his cowardice drives him to seek to redeem himself by being wounded—earning what he calls the "red badge of courage." Praised for its psychological insight and its intense and unprecedented realism in portraying the experience of men under fire, The Red Badge of Courage has been a beloved bestseller for more than a century. The definitive memoir of Arthur Miller—the famous playwright of The Crucible, All My Sons, Death of a Salesman, A View from the Bridge, and other plays—Timebends reveals Miller's incredible trajectory as a man and a writer. Born in 1915, Miller grew up in Harlem in the 1920s and 1930s, developed leftist political convictions during the Great Depression, achieved moral victory against McCarthyism in the 1950s, and became president of PEN International near the end of his life, fighting for writers' freedom of expression. Along the way, his prolific output established him as one of the greatest writers of the twentieth century—he wrote twenty-two plays, various screenplays, short stories, and essays, and won the Pulitzer Prize in 1949 for Death of a Salesmanand the New York Drama Critics Circle Award in 1947 for All My Sons. Miller also wrote the screenplay for The Misfits, Marilyn Monroe's final film. This memoir also reveals the incredible host of notables that populated his life, including Marilyn Monroe, Elia Kazan, Clark Gable, Sir Laurence Olivier, John F. Kennedy, and Mikhail Gorbachev. Leaving behind a formidable reputation in the worlds of theater, cinema, and politics, Arthur Miller died in 2005 but his memoir continues his legacy.
