the state of social

provides some

education of young

Patriarchy in

East Asia

Edited by four nationally recognized
leaders of composition
scholarship,
Composition, Rhetoric,
and Disciplinarity asks
a fundamental question:
can Composition and

Rhetoric, as a discipline, continue its historical commitment to pedagogy without sacrificing equal attention to other areas, such as research and theory? In response, contributors to the volume address disagreements about what it means to be called a discipline rather than a profession or a field; elucidate tensions over the defined breadth of Composition and Rhetoric; and consider the roles of research and responsibility as Composition and Rhetoric shifts from field to discipline. Outlining a field with a complex and unusual formation story,

Composition, Rhetoric,

and Disciplinarity
employs several lenses
for understanding
disciplinarity—theory,
history, labor, and
pedagogy—and for
teasing out the implications of disciplinarity for
students, faculty,
institutions, and
Composition and Rhetoric itself.
Collectively, the chapters speak to the intellectual and embodied history leading to this point; to questions about how disciplinarity is, and might be, understood, especially with regard to Composition and Rhetoric; to the curricular, conceptual, labor, and other sites of tension inherent in thinking about

Composition and Rhetoric as a discipline; and to the implications of Composition and Rhetoric's disciplinarity for the future.
