Following the breakout success of her critically acclaimed and award-winning novel Euphoria, Lily King returns with another instant New York Times bestseller: an unforgettable portrait of an artist as a young woman. Blindsided by her mother's sudden death, and wrecked by a recent love affair, Casey Peabody has arrived in Massachusetts in the summer of 1997 without a plan. Her mail consists of wedding invitations and final notices from debt collectors. A former child golf prodigy, she now waits tables in Harvard Square and rents a tiny, moldy room at the side of a garage where she works on the novel she's been writing for six years. At thirty-one, Casey is still clutching onto something nearly all her old friends have let go of: the determination to live a creative life. When she falls for two very different men at the same time, her world fractures even more.

Casey ' s fight to fulfill her creative ambitions and balance the conflicting demands of art and life is challenged in ways that push her to the brink.

Writers & Lovers follows Casey—a smart and aching vulnerable protagonist—in the last days of a long youth, a time when every element of her life comes to a crisis. Written with King ' s trademark humor, heart, and intelligence, Writers & Lovers is a transfixing novel that explores the terrifying and exhilarating leap between the end of one phase of life and the beginning of another.

well-reasoned account of what teachers of multilingual writers need to know about error and how to put what they know to use. As in the first edition, Ferris again persuasively addresses the fundamental error treatment questions that plague novice and expert writing specialists alike: What types of errors should teachers respond to? When should we respond to them? What are the most efficacious ways of responding to them? And ultimately, what role should error treatment play in the teaching of the process of writing? The second edition improves upon the first by exploring changes in the field since 2002, such as the growing diversity in what is called “ L2 writers, ” the blurring boundaries between “ native ” and “ non-native ” speakers of English, the influence of genre studies and corpus course of the study? Research Activities: Context: This inquiry targeted the needs of my Spanish Language AP class, which consisted of twelve seniors and two juniors. Seven students were classified as English Language Learners, and another five students have been re-designated. All of my students were considered to be native/heritage speakers of Spanish. Instructional Approach: The inquiry lasted four weeks and was divided into two equal phases. The first phase was completed prior to winter vacation in December; the second phase was completed in January.

Students prepared for and participated in debates as a means of showing them how an effective argument is created. The debates targeted two issues: the drug trafficking problem in Mexico and the controversy surrounding immigration and amnesty.

Students then participated in scaffolded activities to explore how to write argumentative essays. These activities included class analysis of argument structure in their peers' essays, the use of graphic organizers, and structured peer-editing workshops. Data Gathering: Data collection included a baseline and outcome quick write, the first drafts and the final essays turned in by the students as the primary achievement data. Students also completed surveys which asked them to specify their degree of confidence while writing, in English and Spanish. Finally, observations were taken during student work days in preparation for the debate and peer-editing workshops. The observation data were behavior notes taken every 10 minutes examining a student's level of engagement on the task at hand. Findings and Conclusions: Comparisons of the baseline and outcome data indicate that the majority of students had a much better understanding of the structure and content of an argumentative essay after the intervention. The majority of students (54%) wrote more in the outcome data essays than in the baseline data essays. Furthermore, 85% of students included some sort of representation of the other side in their second essay. A rebuttal is a key component of an effective argument, which zero students included on their first essay. The findings of the intervention achievement data suggests that scaffolding, peer-editing, and revising stabilize and standardize the essays turned in. For example, although 42% of

A total of 18 students participated in the study, and they were mainly from Saudi Arabia, but a few were from Japan, China, and Pakistan. identification and correction of errors, and a reflective journal on the process with the benefits and challenges. Students had both cultural similarities essays and argumentative essays to use for this activity. A mixed methods approach was used that employed both qualitative and quantitative methodology.

Findings of the study suggest that guided peer response is a positive activity for students and it contributes to improvement with grammar, error identification, and the writing of multilingual writers at the college level. What do Christianity and librarianship have in common? Netherlands Prime Minister and theologian Abraham Kuyper (1837-1920) was among the first in the modern era to attempt to rejoin the dichotomy of sacred vs. secular study when he said, "no single piece of our mental world is to be hermetically sealed off from the rest." Over the years a number of publications have followed Kuyper's lead yet little has been written on the subject since Greg A. Smith's notable Christian Librarianship (2002). Building on Smith's work, this volume seeks to bridge the sacred/secular divide with an exploration of how Christianity and the gospel are manifested through the profession of librarianship.

In Assignments across the Curriculum, Dan Melzer analyzes the rhetorical features and genres of writing assignments through the writing-to-learn and writing-in-the-disciplines perspectives. Presenting the results of his study of 2,101 writing assignments from undergraduate courses in the natural sciences, social sciences, business, and humanities in 100 postsecondary institutions in the United States, Assignments across the Curriculum is unique in its cross-institutional breadth and its focus on writing assignments. The results provide a panoramic view of college writing in the United States. Melzer's framework begins with the rhetorical situations of the assignments—the purposes and audiences—and broadens to include the assignments' genres and discourse community contexts. Among his conclusions is that courses connected to a writing-across-the-curriculum (WAC) initiative ask students to write more often, in a greater variety of genres, and for a greater variety of purposes and audiences than non-WAC courses do, making a compelling case for the influence of the WAC movement. Melzer's work also reveals patterns in the rhetorical situations, genres, and discourse communities of college writing in the United States. These larger patterns are of interest to WAC practitioners working with faculty across disciplines, to writing

Inquiry Paths to Literacy Learning, a collection of chapters from secondary teachers and university researchers, offers English language arts teachers several models and considerations for how to design and implement inquiry-based teaching and learning. As the contributors demonstrate, an inquiry approach can significantly boost student achievement, understanding, and transfer of learning. The chapters in this collection present classroom-tested approaches, activities, and assignments that teachers can use

Focusing on issues that adolescents find consequential, the sample learning activities promote the development of complex literacy skills, engage students in evidence-based reasoning, and foster an environment of cooperation, collaboration, and respect for different points of view. Together, the contributions in this book envision the English language arts classroom as a supportive environment for authentic inquiry and for the genuine democratic processes involved in grappling together with tough perennial and contemporary issues.
