Bridge the gap between phonemic awareness and beginning phonics! Pre-readers and beginning readers practice letter and phoneme recognition by cutting out word or picture cards and sorting them according to each lesson's focus. Activities require very little reading ability.

Most rime events in the Green Mountains are of low intensity, with greatest intensities found in warmer, subfreezing air within 5 C of the dew point. Rime was usually most intense within deep low pressure systems, and was associated with 9- to 10-tenths cloud cover and light precipitation. Rime was rarely associated with high pressure. Most rime events occurred within cold and occluded fronts in southerly to westerly winds. Rime was most intense on the trailing side of cyclones as they moved eastward and poleward of northern Vermont. Nearly all rime deposits during the study period were from the west and northwest. Rosemount ice detector performance on Mt. Mansfield compared favorably to performance of an identical detector on Mt. Washington under similar icing intensities. Feather growth rates were not measured accurately by the Rosemount detector, however. Feathers on equipment exposed similarly to the Rosemount grew at nearly twice the rate indicated by the Rosemount detector. Rime accretion increases at an increasing rate with elevation in the Green Mountains. Rime events are infrequent and have low intensities below 800 m. Rime accretion near the ground surface also correlated with relief exposure, with promontories accumulating more rime than hollows.

The Ancient Rime of Jonah recounts the experiences of the prophet Jonah after he has returned home from his epic journey. The narrator recognizes the prophet as he enters the city gates and is anxious to hear his tale. Soon his audience is captivated by the emotional account of his interactions with sailors, a great fish, the people of Nineveh and the almighty God. There lay the sea the spacious sea. O, how its vats do teem With living things both great and small, abundant and pristine. His adventure dramatizes the truth that the same mercy and forgiveness available from God to Jonah is also available to his enemies when they repent and believe.

This book, the first in its field in a Western language, examines China's native phonological tool with regard to reconstruction, theory, and linguistic philosophy. After an introductory essay on the nature of the tables and the history of their interpretation, the book concentrates on three areas: application of rime table theory to reconstruction, the history of rime table theory, and the application of the tables to descriptive linguistics. An appendix details a number of 20th century systems for transcribing their phonology into Roman letters. Major topics include Altaic contact-influence on Chinese, early native understanding of the tables' meaning, the phonological work of Yuen Ren Chao, and Stammbaumtheorie/diasystemic thinking about Chinese. New reconstructions of Han and "Common Dialectal" phonology appear here, as do complete texts and translations of the Shouwen fragments and Yunjing preface.

One of the classic poems of the romantic period of English literature has been annotated in a new edition. Coleridge's masterpiece has much to recommend it to a modern audience because of its central theme of the importance of "all things both great and small."

The Rime of the Ancient Mariner is the longest major poem by the English poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge. The Rime of the Ancient Mariner relates the experiences of a sailor who has returned from a long sea voyage. The mariner stops a man who is on the way to a wedding ceremony and begins to narrate a story. The wedding-guest's reaction turns from bemusement to impatience to fear to fascination as the mariner's story progresses, as can be seen in the language style: Coleridge uses narrative techniques such as personification and repetition to create a sense of danger, the supernatural, or serenity, depending on the mood in different parts of the poem. The mariner's tale begins with his ship departing on its journey. Despite initial good fortune, the ship is driven south by a storm and eventually reaches Antarctica. An albatross appears and leads them out of the Antarctic, but even as the albatross is praised by the ship's crew, the mariner shoots the bird ("with my cross-bow / I shot the albatross"). The crew is angry with the mariner, believing the albatross brought the south wind that led them out of the Antarctic. However, the sailors change their minds when the weather becomes warmer and the mist disappears ("'Twas right, said they, such birds to slay / that bring the fog and mist"). However, they made a grave mistake in supporting this crime, as it arouses the wrath of spirits who then pursue the ship "from the land of mist and snow"; the south wind that had initially led them from the land of ice now sends the ship into uncharted waters, where it is becalmed.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge (1772-1834) was an English poet, theologian, literary critic, philosopher, and co-founder of the English Romantic Movement. He was also a member of the famous Lake Poets, together with William Wordsworth and Robert Southey. Coleridge had a significant influence on the the work of Ralph Waldo Emerson and American Transcendentalism bringing German idealist philosophy to the English-speaking world. One of Coleridge's most famous works, "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" was written in 1798 and represents his longest major poetic work. It is generally considered to be a turning point signalling a shift towards modern poetry and the beginning of British Romantic literature. This wonderful poem by lovers of Romantic poetry. Contents include: 'Samuel Taylor Coleridge, by Mary E. Litchfield', 'The Ancient Mariner', by Edward Everett Hale', 'Argument of the Ancient Mariner, by Mary E. Litchfield', 'Part the First', 'Part the Second', 'Part the Third', 'Part the Fourth', 'Part the Fifth', etc. Ragged Hand is proud to be republishing this seminal poem now in a brand new edition.
