on the cusp of the new. Black Swan Green tracks a single year in what is, for thirteen-year-old Jason Taylor, the sleepest village in midliest Worcestershire in a dying Cold War England, 1982. But the thirteen chapters, each a short story in its own right, create an exquisitely observed world that is anything but sleepy. A world of Kissingeresque realpolitik enacted in boys' games on a frozen lake: of "nightcreeping" through the summer backyards of strangers: of the tabloid-fueled thrills of the Falklands War and its hubbub. Wilcox: of a certain Madame Eva van Outryve de Crommelync, an elderly bohemian emigre who is both more and less than she appears: of Jason's search to replace his dead grandfather's irreplaceable smashed watch before the crime is discovered: of first cigarettes, first kisses, first Duran Duran LPs, and first deaths: of Margaret Thatcher's recession: of Gypsies camping in the woods and the hysteria they inspire: and, even closer to home, of a slow-motion divorce in four seasons. Pointed, funny, profound, left-field—subtlet and most effective achievement to date. Praise for Black Swan Green "[David Mitchell has created] one of the most endearing, smart, and funny young narrators ever to rise up from the pages of a novel. . . . The always fresh and brilliant writing will carry readers back to their own childhoods. . . .
